BIOGRAPHICAL SUMMARY

Nina Nicoloso has over 33 years of Human Resources experience in Health Care that includes but is not limited to recruitment, retention, on-boarding, benefits, workers' compensation, employee relations, Human Resources Information Systems, leave management, unemployment compensation and vacancy management.

In addition to Nina's generalist experience, she has worked with all levels of leadership and staff, managing a Workers' Compensation Program, Unemployment Compensation, assisting with the build of a new Human Resources Information System (HRIS) and maintaining local HRIS records.

In her current role, Nina's responsibilities include vacancy management, leave management, talent recruitment, on-boarding, new employee orientation, employee engagement, employee relations, benefits and updating the Human Resources Information System.

Nina began her career at North Penn Hospital, a not for profit community hospital, where she worked in all aspects of the Human Resources field. When North Penn Hospital was sold to Universal Health Services (UHS), a for profit company, she continued to work for the new hospital, Central Montgomery Medical Center, in Human Resources and also managed the hospital's workers' compensation program. With both these employers she worked in various positions that included Employment Coordinator, Interim Human Resources Director, and Human Resources Manager.

Nina currently works as a Senior Human Resources Business Partner at Abington–Lansdale Hospital.

Her experiences working in all areas of Human Resources and with staff at all levels have broadened her knowledge base and allowed her to adeptly manage situations that arise. The best part of her job is the people she comes in contact with. Nina enjoys the opportunity to help others grow within the organization, while at the same time recognizing her own opportunity to learn from them.

In her personal time, Nina enjoys vacationing wherever there is a beach and spending time with her family.
